Books Descriptions

He's a liberal. She's conservative. What could go wrong? When progressive, bisexual MIT junior Nathan Campbell meets Marina Salinas on the hockey rink, he's immediately smitten. She's gorgeous, smart, funny, competitive. There's just one problem. She's a Republican. Unable to resist each other, Nate and Marina begin to date in secret, sneaking around Boston to explore what they both know is a really bad idea. But beyond the bubble of their growing affection, tensions on campus are rising. When Nate's roommate tries to get Marina's friend expelled for hate-speech, they'll both be forced to pick sides. Can their spark survive the storms of political division? Or will they, like so many others, be unable to overcome the things between them?
